Celebrates

Lohri

Tuesday January 13th, 2026

Program:

7:00 pm: Agni Puja/lighting of the festive fire

(Special puja for the 1st Lohri of the baby or 1st Lohri for newlywed couples)

Followed by Lohri Songs and dance.

Venue: The Havan Area

Lohri is celebrated a day before Makara Sankranti, as it marks the end of the winter season. Lohri is traditionally associated with the harvest of the rabi crops. During the day, children go from door to door singing folk songs. The treats gathered by the children are known as Lohri and consist of sesame seeds, crystal sugar, jaggery, peanuts, popcorn, rewaries. A bonfire is lit after sunset. People sit around it, offer Lohri to the bonfire. Singing and dancing is an intrinsic part of this celebration. Some people perform a prayer and go around the fire. This is to show respect to the natural element of fire (Agni Devata). In families that have recently had a marriage or childbirth, Lohri is celebrated with even more excitement. Milk and water is also offered around the bonfire. This ritual is performed for thanking the Sun God and seeking his continued protection.
